Usually fairway woods have smaller heads comparing to golf drivers. This aspect makes fairway woods easier than drivers when it comes to controlling the swing. It is advisable for beginners to opt for fairway woods instead of trying to use a driver. You can use the fairway to hit the driver if you are a skilled golfer. Greater lofts and smaller heads of fairway woods help in hitting the ball high into the air. Fairway woods are convenient to handle than long drivers and are used basically by amateur golfers and beginners. The main purpose of both drivers and fairway woods is to strike the club. In simple words drivers are used to hit the ball on the upswing and fairway wood is used to hit the club at swing bottom.

It is easier to dominate a sub niche like "German Shepherd Training" compared to "Dogs". You want to become an authority and create an alliance with your competitors. A specific sub niche will be much more focused on your target market.

It is necessary for a player to undergo intense training sessions under different conditions to understand the game play. Such an opportunity provides to implement different shots, angles, setups and positioning which improves the skill. It also delivers good amount of knowledge in the player. Constant practice will improve overall precise delivery in a shot which increases the chances to achieve birdie or even eagle. Practicing will also improve coordination between mind and body. Improvement in body movement will greatly help achieve high precise shots. You will also learn how to balance your total weight, the amount pressure that you must apply on the club and the holding position of the club.
