In a Facebook post last week, the activist raised questions about Joe Biden's election strategy, warning of a repeat of the 2016 election

"Are you ready for a Trump victory? "

This is not an affirmation of celebration from a Donald Trump supporter, but a warning from filmmaker Michael Moore. The Oscar-winning documentary director posted on social media that signs are pointing to a Trump reelection come November.

Moore, an avid critic of the president and advocate of Sen. Bernie Sanders, took to his Facebook page to let his followers know that history may be repeating itself as the president's poll numbers rise in swing states that will be critical to winning the electoral college.

"Sorry to have to provide the reality check again, but when CNN polled registered voters in August in just the swing states, Biden and Trump were in a virtual tie, " Moore wrote. "In Minnesota, it's 47-47. In Michigan, where Biden had a big lead, Trump has closed the gap to 4 points. "The filmmaker feels that Democrats" lack of campaigning in said swing or battleground states Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio, Colorado, Florida, Iowa, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Wisconsin is the same flaw that may have doomed Hilary Clinton in the 2016 election.

"The Biden campaign just announced he'll be visiting a number of states" but not Michigan. Sound familiar? "

Former Vice President Joe Biden said at a fundraiser Thursday, the same day of Moore's post, that he would begin traveling to hold campaign events since the coronavirus pandemic limited his campaign, including the Democratic National Convention, to virtual outreach. Wisconsin, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Arizona are being considered for stops, according to NBC-affiliate KARE in Minneapolis.
